Specialty biopharmaceutical company can easily organize, assign, and track training for improved audit-readiness and compliance

PLEASANTON, CA — May 18, 2020 — Veeva Systems (NYSE:VEEV) today announced that Alvotech, a biopharmaceutical company specializing in biosimilars, adopted Veeva Vault Training for more effective role-based training across its organization. With Vault Training, Alvotech can easily assign and track training tasks based on specific job functions or roles to remain audit ready and compliant within Europe.

The addition of Vault Training builds upon the company's success with Vault QMS and Vault QualityDocs, giving Alvotech a suite of advanced quality, document, and training management applications to automate and harmonize quality processes globally.

"We deployed Veeva Vault Training in only four months from project kick-off to full migration of all legacy training records, and were immediately training people, tracking completion, and monitoring qualification status," said Gudmundur Oskarsson, chief information officer at Alvotech. "We're pleased to be among the first companies to implement Vault Training in Europe. Together with Veeva Vault QMS and Veeva Vault QualityDocs, we can now seamlessly bring together quality processes, content, and training."

Alvotech is a fast-growing company that needed an effective way to manage and verify the right people are trained and current on the latest quality policies and procedures. Since April 2020, Alvotech has distributed more than 16,000 new training assignments with Vault Training. Combined with Vault QualityDocs and Vault QMS, quality teams can provide individuals easy content access to complete training tasks, as well as have complete traceability of new training requirements.

"Veeva enables Alvotech to modernize quality processes, document control, and training to drive greater speed and efficiency throughout its operations," said Robert Gaertner, senior director of strategy for Veeva Vault Quality. "We're proud to continue our strategic partnership with Alvotech and help its teams effectively manage and deliver training for improved compliance and audit-readiness."
